Egyptian brinkmanship

NOTHING to do with Egypt is very clear at present. The most convincing interpretation of what has happened there, on the face of it, is that it was brinkmanship that slipped over the edge which caused President Sadat to expel the Soviet presence when he was trying to press for enough help to fight another war against Israel. It was brinkmanship that took Nasser over the edge and into war in 1967, when he wanted to intimidate Israel into accepting some kind of second-class, less-than-sovereign status.

What concerns us more closely is exactly what Sadat has in mind when he declares his willingness to have an Egyptian delegation meet an Israeli delegation in what he calls the presence of the four powers — Rhodes-style talks, with the powers replacing the U.N. If we begin at the end, we may assume that he chooses the "powers" because the U.N. representatives have lost their credibility and acceptability in Israel since the ill-fated Jarring document seeking a prior commitment to withdrawal by Israel.

The four powers would be marginally more acceptable to Israel, he must suppose; this means that he is genuinely interested in talks and not seeking sympathy. He may believe they would give him what he wants, the return of Sinai, in exchange for only a vague peace agreement with the powers, not with Israel, and an explanation that he cannot commit himself to real peace until what he calls "the rights of the Palestinians" are restored, i.e. until Israel's present political structure is dismantled. If President Sadat threw out the Russians so unceremoniously because he realized they were not going to help him fight Israel, and were not capable of forcing Israel into withdrawal, it is reasonable that he should turn promptly to a group of powers who might, he believes, join together to get him back into his former position in Palestine and give him at least an illusion of victory.

There is little in the offer for Israel except the fact that he is willing to hold meetings, even if he wishes the powers to make the decisions. Nobody in Israel would expect themselves to such a condition for the powers have their own concerns and interests to protect and will not worry too much today whether another Egyptian army might be poised for attack on Israel three or five years hence.

Nevertheless it is a distinct step forward that an Egyptian president should propose a high-level meeting and it will be important to see the Egyptian popular reaction.

The very considerable progress towards peace that has been achieved in the West Bank and with Jordan itself has not come through any of the normal methods but by informal contacts and the rebuilding of some degree of confidence on both sides. There have been few contacts with Egypt yet, and the meeting of delegations could be a first step towards the discussion of such practical matters as the nature of the Suez Canal.

No doubt the proposal is included by President Sadat as another piece of brinkmanship, another gamble to regain Sinai. The other Egyptian gambles are not turned out as expected, a should gamble on this one out, since with no commitment of course to accept decisions by any or all of the powers.

Egypt F.M. to see Waldheim, Jarring

Jerusalem Post Arab Affairs Reporter
Egyptian Foreign Minister Murad Ghaleb is expected to fly to New York next weekend for talks with U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim and his envoy, Dr. Gunnar Jarring. The Egyptian Foreign Minister is also expected to confer with U.S. Assistant Secretary of State Joseph Sisco who has been conducting a drive aimed at reopening the Suez Canal after Cairo's ouster of Russian troops.

The Egyptian minister's journey marks a major diplomatic move on the part of Cairo after a two-year stalemate. Mr. Ghaleb yesterday conferred in Cairo with the ambassadors of Britain, France and the Soviet Union, but there were no reports of any meeting with the U.S. chief diplomat in Cairo, Joseph Greene, who a fortnight ago conferred with Egypt's Presidential Adviser on National Security Affairs, Hafez Ismail.

Sadat may go to New York Egypt offensive on U.S., Israel in U.N. expected

PARIS. — Following the expulsion of Soviet military personnel Egypt is expected to mount a major diplomatic offensive against Israel and the U.S. at the U.N. General Assembly next month.

According to diplomatic sources here, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat may himself go to New York to address the Assembly. Such a campaign, directed at soliciting support in Europe and among non-aligned nations, would be designed to exploit to the full the generally favourable world response to Sadat's decision to expel the Soviets.

It would be aimed to highlight Israel's isolation in the world body and embarrass the U.S. by emphasizing that Washington is Israel's sole source of genuine support. Arab diplomats believe that one way of achieving U.S. pressure on Israel is to make the U.S. uncomfortable diplomatically about its role.

Such an offensive would also enable Sadat to reassert Egypt's leadership of the Arab cause against Israel, bolstering his image. As part of the campaign Sadat is also expected to stop in Paris, after his visit in New York, for a meeting with French President Pompidou.

A hint of the developing Arab focus on the U.N. General Assembly was given yesterday in the Kuwaiti newspaper, "al-Ra'y al-Aam," which quoted informed sources as saying that "certain countries friendly to the Arabs would sponsor a resolution at the Assembly calling for Israel's expulsion from the international body. The paper did not name the countries concerned. It said their call for expelling Israel would be based on the grounds that Israel's membership was "not legitimate." (INA, Reuters)

MINIMAL RESISTANCE ENCOUNTERED

British Army takes all Ulster 'no-go' areas

LONDONDERRY. — Armoured columns of British troops stormed into the forbidden "no-go" areas of Northern Ireland early yesterday, brushing aside light resistance and smashing down the barricades guarding the strongholds of the Irish Republican Army.

By early yesterday morning, the troops were in firm command. A British soldier with a rifle across his knees was lounging in a chair outside the I.R.A. headquarters in Londonderry's Catholic Bogside district — most formidable of all the "no-go" zones. There was no sign of the I.R.A. men who have ruled the district for months past and who vowed to keep the British Army out. British officers believed most of them may have skipped across the border into the Irish Republic.

But six persons died during the morning in three bomb explosions in the small village of Claudy, 22 kms. from here. Britain's Northern Ireland administrator, William Whitelaw, spent a tense night supervising the operation in which something like 15,000 troops went into action supported by armoured cars, helicopters and

'Unlimited credit' for Israel urged

WASHINGTON (INA). — Bipartisan legislation to ensure continuity of Israel's line of credit for purchase of military equipment from the U.S. was introduced in the Senate yesterday by Sen. Henry Jackson (D-Wash.), with Senators Gordon Allott (R-Col) and Abraham Ribicoff (D-Conn.) co-sponsoring the measure.

Sen. Jackson urged approval of an amendment to the Defense Procurement Act, now under debate in the Senate, which would extend authorization of "unlimited credit" to Israel for an additional 15 months to December 31, 1973. Section 501 of that act, providing the credit, expires next October 31.

Sen. Allott also spoke for the authorization but Sen. John Stennis (D-Miss) opposed it on technical grounds, contending it should come from the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. The original credit measure, also introduced by Sen. Jackson, which brought about the first line of credit of $500m. for Israel, was approved by the Senate in September 1970 by a vote of 87 to seven, over the opposition of Sen. William Fulbright, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee.

Sen. Jackson said he was introducing the new legislation in view of the Senate rejection on July 24 of the foreign military aid bill which Israel was to have received a military credit of up to $900m. and a supporting economic grant of $85m. Meanwhile, the House Foreign Affairs Committee sent to the House floor yesterday legislation for a new military sales act providing a total of $829m., of which $300m. is earmarked as a credit for Israel to buy equipment, and an additional $50m. as a grant for economic supporting assistance.

Israel Government to abolish the travel tax.

Alitalia has been one of the most vociferous critics of the travel tax, since it considers itself more discriminated against than other airlines operating on longer routes. (The fixed tax of IL600 almost doubles the $160 round-trip fare from Lod to Rome.)

There were still no indications yesterday when the new reduction authorities have already understood that Alitalia had been preparing to announce the refund deal as a "surprise package" but was caught off-balance by yesterday's premature news leak.

SAPIR OPPOSES DAYAN'S VIEWS ON ARAB POLICY

Jerusalem Post Reporter
TEL AVIV. — Finance Minister Pinhas Sapir yesterday told a TV panel that he concurred with the demand of Defense Minister Moshe Dayan that the Labour Party and the government should decide on the nature of Israel's relations with the territories and their 1,350,000 inhabitants. But he made it crystal clear that the future he envisages is diametrically opposed to that of Mr. Dayan.

Mr. Sapir recapitulated his well-known objections to integrating the territories and their population in the State of Israel, warning of the danger to the very nature of the Jewish State. He was very firm in sounding the alarm on the "demographic" danger. Mr. Sapir was convinced that if and when peace would come, even if there were no diplomatic relations, as Anwar Sadat insisted, there would be economic ties between Israel and its neighbours. But he proceeded to warn of the danger to the fabric of Israeli society from Arab labour from the territories, and quoted from Mr. Dayan's complaint about Arab workers who sleep behind garbage cans. The Finance Minister raised the spectre of deteriorating Arab-Jewish relations in work places once a recession came and the issue arose of who got fired first. He pointed to the danger of the Jewish majority being swamped by an ever-burgeoning Arab birth rate. Given the present Arab birth rate, in a few decades even extremists, if cons-fronted with the question "do you want a Jewish State without Hebron, to a binational state with Hebron?" would prefer the former," Mr. Sapir said. While favouring a decision on this issue the Minister said: "I am not among the initiators." He advised Mr. Dayan "who is a member of the Party Leadership Bureau, while I am not" to raise the matter at the top party policy-making forum. "No one has bothered to table such a motion at the cabinet," he said in what was taken as implied criticism of Mr. Dayan. The Finance Minister reiterated

Sadat in Tobruk for talks

Jerusalem Post Arab Affairs Reporter
President Anwar Sadat yesterday arrived in Libya for what was being trumpeted in Cairo and Tripoli as "historic talks" with the Libyan young leadership headed by Mu'ammer Gaddafi, on the possible formation of a single state.

The Middle East News Agency said that Sadat, heading a large delegation of senior aides, was given a rousing welcome on landing at the Gamal Abdul Nasser airport in Tobruk, the site of World War II battles of tank armadas. Egypt still maintained silence on the merger issue. Cairo newspapers emphasized yesterday that Sadat has gone to Libya to discuss "the present Middle East situation in the aftermath of Sadat's latest decisions" concerning the withdrawal of Soviet troops from Egypt.

"Al-Ahram" newspaper said that the Egyptian and the Libyan leaders would tackle "means to strengthen efforts and mobilize joint potentials in support of the Arab self-force in the confrontation with the Israeli aggression."

Iraqi Defence Minister leaves for Moscow

Jerusalem Post Arab Affairs Reporter
Iraq's Defence Minister, Lt.-Gen. Hamad Shehab, left Baghdad yesterday for Moscow on a two-week official visit at the invitation of his Soviet counterpart, Marshal Andrei Grechko, the official Iraqi news agency reported.

The agency quoted General Shehab as saying on departure that he would hold talks on the development of relations between Iraq and the Soviet Union.

Egypt driving for new U.S. stand on M.E.

By DAVID LANDAU
Jerusalem Post Diplomatic Correspondent
Egypt-watchers in Jerusalem yesterday said they saw President Sadat's interview with "Newsweek" as an attempt to both threaten and cajole Washington into adopting a new stand in the Middle East.

In the interview — with the magazine's foreign editor Arnold de Borghese — Mr. Sadat indicated that pressure may be brought to bear on U.S. oil interests in the Middle East. "All I can tell you," he said, "is that U.S. interests will shortly become part of the battle for the recovery of our land."

He also said that Egypt was ready for a "peace arrangement" with Israel, after Israel had withdrawn from the occupied territories, but not for a full-fledged peace-treaty, which could only come after a solution of the Palestinian problem.

Observers here noted that despite Mr. Sadat's talk about U.S. interests, and his encouragement of other Middle East states to act against them, Egypt itself is careful to maintain excellent relations with Standard Oil of Indiana which has vast oil interests in Egypt. When all Americans were ousted from Egypt in 1967, the oil engineers and technicians were excepted. Production figures have leapt in the past five years.

India praises Simla accord over protests

NEW DELHI. — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's Government yesterday pushed through Parliament a motion praising the new peace agreement with Pakistan over shouts of "treason" by right-wing members.

It was a raucous ending to the first sitting of the monsoon session of the Lok Sabha, Parliament's lower house.

Earlier all opposition parties except the Communists and a few independents had left the chamber for an hour after speaker G. S. Dhillon refused to allow a censure motion against the Government over high prices.

As Foreign Minister Swaran Singh stood to read a prepared statement about the Simla accord, opposition members led by A. E. Vajpayee, leader of the Hindu nationalist Jana Sangh, objected noisily.

Eleven Jana Sangh members, screaming in protest, walked to the dais. Some sat on the floor. Two tore up documents they said were copies of the agreement and tossed the pieces into the air. All shouted, one into a microphone.

An estimated 100,000 people marched through New Delhi streets while Parliament sat, in protest against the peace agreement. The march was organized by the Jana Sangh. (AP, Reuters)

Arafat suffering breakdown

Jerusalem Post Arab Affairs Reporter: Fatah chief Yasser Arafat was yesterday reported to be confined to bed in Alexandria at what was being described as "a special rest house."

Cairo's "Al-Ahram" said yesterday that Arafat was suffering from "exhaustion." Indications, however, were that Arafat is suffering from a nervous breakdown. "Al-Ahram" said that President Sadat has sent "several" doctors to attend the Fatah leader.

Arafat, who is also the chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization, was reported to have fallen ill on Saturday shortly after he had had a two-hour conference with Sadat in Alexandria.

According to Beirut reports, Arafat has been concerned over Sadat's latest dismissal of Soviet troops stationed in Egypt and over the Egyptian President's latest political moves which the terrorists consider to be aimed at defusing the armed struggle — the theme of the terrorist movement.

Earlier on Friday, he conferred with the Egyptian Minister of War General Mohammed Ahmed Sadek, but no details on their talks were disclosed.

Yesterday, Arafat told a news conference the Soviet Union has agreed to fully support his movement, the Middle East News Agency reported.

Moroccans jailed for illegal politicking

RABAT (Reuters). — Thirty Moroccans have been sentenced to prison terms ranging from two to six months on charges of re-forming an outlawed political party and distributing tracts liable to disturb public order, it was stated here yesterday.

All Yata, former Secretary-General of the Party of Liberation and Socialism, which the accused were charged with re-forming, said in a communique that they were convicted by the Marrakesh regional court in south Morocco.

Three more Dubcek supporters on trial

PRAGUE (AP). — Three prominent supporters of ousted Communist Party chief Alexander Dubcek went on trial yesterday. They included Milan Huelbl, who had been a member of the Czechoslovak Communist Party Central Committee under Mr. Dubcek.

Mr. Huelbl is charged under Paragraph 98, Article 2, which covers subversion. It convicted he faces a sentence of three to 10 years' imprisonment. He was a member of the Central Committee immediately following the August 1968, Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia, and is regarded as the most prominent defendant in a series of political trials that began two weeks ago.

The other two defendants who went on trial with Mr. Huelbl are Karel Kucera, a well-known television commentator and member of the Prague Communist Party City Committee before he was expelled in 1969, and Karel Bartosek, a historian who in the early 'fifties wrote a booklet on the "shameful role of the American army in Pilsen" and later co-authored a book on the 1945 Prague uprising.

They are also charged with subversion but under Article One of Paragraph 98, providing for a sentence of one to five years. All three were arrested last January and their case is believed to be connected with the writing and distribution of underground pre-election leaflets discussing citizens' rights and duties in the election act.

The trial is expected to last three to four days. It is one in a series that began in Prague and Brno two weeks ago and have apparently involved 24 defendants so far. The most severe sentence meted out was six years in prison.

The official news agency C.T.K. said "Huelbl and his group attempt to weaken the socialist state system by preparing illegal seditious printed matter, by circulating it in the Czech Socialist Republic and by sending it abroad."

Columnist Jack Anderson, left, talks with Democratic vice-presidential candidate Thomas Eagleton on Sunday after they appeared on TV programme. Anderson apologized for reporting that Sen. Marshal Yeh says schemes of traitors 'shattered'

PEKING (Reuters). — Former Marshal Yeh Chien-ying — tipped as China's new Defence Minister — told the country's leaders at a glittering banquet here last night that the schemes of traitors had been shattered.

The veteran revolutionary said the People's Liberation Army (P.L.A.) had "shattered the criminal schemes of the traitors, enemy agents and careerists who wormed their way into the party to usurp the party leadership, seize power and restore capitalism."

In all but name, Marshal Yeh attacked former Defence Minister Lin Biao. Last Friday the Chinese confirmed that Lin was killed in a plane crash while fleeing the country last September after trying to overthrow Chairman Mao Tse-tung.

At last night's banquet in the Great Hall of the People, almost the nation's entire leadership except Chairman Mao was present. The official occasion was the 45th anniversary of the founding of the P.L.A.

The genial-looking, bespectacled Marshal Yeh, who wore his army uniform last night for only the second time in several years, is expected by envoys here to be appointed Defence Minister shortly. But he is not expected to be named as heir apparent to Chairman Mao as Lin Biao was.

Yesterday's traditional Army Day editorial in the Communist Party journal, the "People's Daily," declared that any careerist or conspirator who wanted to undermine the army as just daydreaming. "Mountains may be shaken but the P.L.A. never."

Mr. Onesti said he had discussed such a possibility with Chinese sports officials. "Nobody wants China's absence from the Olympics to ever happen again in the future," Mr. Onesti said.

Iran executes four saboteurs trained in Iraq

TEHRAN. — Four Iraqi-trained saboteurs were executed yesterday by firing squad at Susangerd, near the Iraq border, where they were captured one year ago, an official announcement said here.

The four men, identified as Razaq Yazinzadeh, Mohammed Kaabi, Sayed-Mohammed Mousevi and Sayed-Nasser Jadedeh, were members of an eight-man team which infiltrated into Iran from Iraq to sabotage military and oil installations. It said three members of the team were killed in a gun battle with security agents.

A spokesman also announced that an Iranian border guard was wounded when eight Iraqi Ba'athist saboteurs opened fire on an Iranian border post on Saturday night.

The spokesman said the saboteurs attacked the border post near San-dash. They tried to kidnap a frontier guard but were forced to retreat by counter-fire. (AP, Reuters)

New York Plaza Hotel held up

NEW YORK (AP). — Five men in business suits and mustaches called at the plush Plaza Hotel early yesterday, herded 20 employees and guests into a back room and rifled 15 to 20 safe deposit boxes.

Police said they had no immediate estimate of the haul.

A similar robbery at the exclusive Hotel Pierre last New Year's weekend netted an estimated $1m, to $4m, in gems — most of which have not been recovered.

In yesterday's robbery, the bandit team pulled up at the Plaza, located on Fifth Avenue at the southern edge of Central Park, at about 4 a.m. They rifled the boxes and drove off an hour later in a tan station wagon.

U.S. Gov't wants Douglas overruled in Ellsberg trial

WASHINGTON (AP). — The U.S. Government urged the Supreme Court yesterday to overrule Justice William Douglas and order a re-trial of the Pentagon Papers trial of Daniel Ellsberg and Anthony Russo.

Justice Douglas has blocked the trial, possibly for months, in a dispute over wiretapping. The Justice Department accused him of impermissible interference and said the action could forever preclude trial of Messrs. Ellsberg and Russo on the indictment.

Solicitor General Erwin Griswold's plea could lead to a special summer session.

Messrs. Ellsberg and Russo were on trial in Los Angeles on various charges stemming from public disclosure of the once-secret study of the Vietnam war when the government revealed a defence attorney had been overheard in a wiretap.

New cabinet in Greece

ATHENS (UPI). — Premier George Papadopoulos yesterday installed a new cabinet which includes 12 of the military colleagues who helped bring him to power in an April 1967 coup.

Political observers said governing power now is shared directly among the men who led the forces which overthrew parliamentary democracy in Greece. Previously the military coup leaders had only a few representatives in the cabinet, including the Premier, Deputy Premier Stylianos Pattakos and Nickolas Makarezos.

The new cabinet of 41 men, four more than the previous administration, also includes two men who served in pre-1967 parliaments. It is the first time the Premier has included politicians in his cabinet.

The surprise move began early yesterday at an unscheduled cabinet meeting when Mr. Papadopoulos demanded and received the resignations of his old cabinet.

The cabinet was formed less than a year ago. On Aug. 26, 1971, Mr. Papadopoulos staged his fifth major cabinet shuffle, downgrading Messrs. Pattakos and Makarezos, respectively the former Minister of Interior and economic czar. Political sources said last August that the move apparently brought Mr. Papadopoulos a step closer to assuming complete power in Greece.

Three shot in Uganda for armed robbery

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP). — Three men were publicly executed at the sports ground near Lugard, 48 kms. east of here, for their alleged part in a £1,500 robbery from a hospital, the vernacular language daily "Tala-fa Empya" reported yesterday.

The paper said the three, all employees of the hospital, were shot in front of a crowd of several thousand people last weekend by Uganda's public safety unit — a special police squad charged with hunting down armed robbers.

'Guardian' blasts Israel role in U.S. politics

By DAVID LENNON
Jerusalem Post Correspondent

LONDON. — The "Guardian" yesterday published a stinging attack on the way Israel allegedly uses the Jewish vote to influence American politics in a presidential election year.

Ambassador Yitzhak Rabin is the target of a charge of "arrogance" in his attitude towards Sen. George McGovern and of "disgraceful interference in America's domestic politics," in the article by Peter Jenkins, the paper's Washington correspondent.

Mr. Jenkins writes that he finds it distressing that "so many American Jews, or at least their political leaders, are prepared to behave as a nation within a nation."

Mr. Rabin is taken to task for "making clear his own preference and, presumably, his government's for the re-election of President Nixon." The writer also states that Mr. Nixon overruled his advisers in deciding to supply Israel with additional Phantom jets last year because he was "simply after the Jewish vote which has hitherto been a Democratic monopoly."

Mr. Jenkins continues, "I would like to be able to report that Senator McGovern was the first American politician to declare that he was running for election by Americans who put their own country first. But, poor man, with Mayor Daley and George Meany not numbered among his best friends he has had to grovel for the Jewish vote. Under the pressure of the Zionist lobby he has moved from being a middle-of-the-road United Nations man to the stance of an extreme hawk. I suspect that he is as sick in his heart about it as I am."

The writer then goes on to describe how Sen. McGovern has promised to furnish arms to Israel and has supported recognizing Jerusalem as the capital of Israel — all in order to court the Jewish voters.

"None of this availed him. When he first requested to see the Israeli Ambassador, Mr. Yitzhak Rabin, he was regrettably refused. When he eventually agreed to receive the man who might be the next President of the U.S., McGovern — if I am reliably told — demeaned himself by asking what he should say and what he could do to satisfy the Israelis."

Mr. Jenkins also makes it quite clear why he is writing in such a fit of pique. He is upset that all this "Zionist lobbying" means that "neither the Administration nor the Opposition will respond to what is quite evidently an attempt by President Sadat to wriggle out of his Soviet straightjacket into a non-aligned position."

The correspondent notes in the article that he expects the "usual inpouring of abusive fan mail branding me as an anti-Semite." He is quick to follow this with the information that he is now off for a three-week holiday, presumably far away from the reach of the postman. The "Guardian," however, is not going on holiday.

600 ships in U.K. idle

LONDON (UPI). — Nearly 600 ships are lying idle in British seaports as a result of a nationwide walkout by longshoremen now in its fourth day, the Chamber of Shipping said yesterday.

A 15-man joint union-management committee met yesterday for the first time since the walkout started on Friday to try to formulate a new peace bid. It was headed by Lord Adlington, chairman of the Port of London Authority, and Jack Jones, General Secretary of the Transport and General Workers Union.

The committee last week published a plan providing for greater job security for longshoremen. But a dockers' delegation conference rejected it as inadequate.

Flying squads of striking longshoremen moved in to blockade small seaports that so far have escaped the shutdown.

Central food markets reported food prices were beginning to soar as the longshoremen's strike started to bite.

Australian mine blasts kill 14

BRISBANE, Australia (UPI). — Bulldozers poured tons of earth into the mouth of the Box Hill colliery near Ipswich yesterday, sealing the fate of 14 men trapped in the mine by two pre-dawn explosions.

The explosions followed a fire in the mine which crews had been fighting for six hours. Five priests held a short burial service on a hill overlooking the mine. It was Queensland's worst mining disaster in 51 years.

Walter Roach, chief inspector of Queensland mines, said the decision to seal off the mine was inculcated hard to make. "But we had no option because of the risk of further explosions and it was so very obvious that there was just no hope for the men trapped underground."

Mr. Roach's own nephew, John Roach, 44, was one of the trapped men.

Eight of the dead men were part of the mine's rescue team investigating a reported fire in the No. 5 shaft when they were hit by the explosion. The Queensland state government yesterday ordered an official investigation.

Two Phantoms, B-52 crash in Indochina

SAIGON. — A U.S. Air Force B-52 heavy bomber and two Phantom fighter-bombers crashed on Sunday as American planes accelerated the air war with more than 600 missions over North and South Vietnam, the U.S. command said yesterday.

The Command said five of the six crewmen aboard the B-52 heavy bomber, loaded with 30 tons of ordnance, were killed in the crash 110 kms. northwest of Ubon air base and 105 kms. west of the Laotian border. One crewman survived.

The four crewmen aboard the two F-4 Phantom fighter-bombers were rescued, the Command said.

The B-52 was streaking toward a bombing mission in Vietnam during a thunderstorm when it crashed and exploded in northeast Thailand on Sunday night.

One of the F-4 Phantoms ran out of fuel while manoeuvring to avoid a Mig interceptor, and the other failed to rendezvous with the refueling tanker for unknown reasons, the Command reported.

Despite the crash on Sunday, other B-52 bombers from Ubon and Guam carried out more than 100 strikes in North Vietnam, South Vietnam and Laos. About half of the raids were concentrated in Quang Tri province, where South Vietnamese troops continue to battle for control of the capital of the northernmost province.

The Command reported more than 310 fighter-bomber strikes across North Vietnam on Sunday against fuel lines and depots, naval and air bases, warehouses, bridges, highways and radar sites. The raids were the heaviest in more than a week, due to clearing skies, sources said.

Allied artillery fired 20,000 rounds of shells into Quang Tri city and the North Vietnamese stronghold inside the walled Citadel yesterday, field reports said.

"We're going to throw so much artillery in there that we'll be able to walk right in without seeing a living soul," a U.S. officer to the South Vietnamese Marines told UPI reporter Ted Kurus. (UPI, AP)

Germans jail 2 Czech hijackers

NUREMBERG (UPI). — A state criminal court sentenced two Czechoslovak miners to seven years' imprisonment each yesterday for hijacking a small passenger plane from Prague to Nuremberg last April.

The miners, Karel Dolasek, 28, and Antonin Lerch, 23, shot and wounded the co-pilot of a twin-engine aircraft on April 13 during a domestic flight from Prague to Marianske Lazne (Marienbad). They then ordered the pilot to fly to Nuremberg, where they asked for political asylum.

It was the third time in two years Czechoslovak citizens hijacked or stole planes, flew to Nuremberg and requested asylum.

Soccer fans shoot players

MONTEVIDEO (AP). — Two amateur soccer players were shot by angry fans of the opposing team during a Sunday game, the Uruguayan police reported yesterday.

They said forward Julio D'Oliveira, 21, was shot and collapsed as he was trying to make another goal for his team, Barrrial. The assailant, believed to be two men and two women, continued shooting and hit one of D'Oliveira's teammates four times.

The gunmen escaped in the confusion. Both victims were taken to hospital where D'Oliveira was reported to be in critical condition.

'RUSSIANS NEVER FULLY TRUSTED HIM'

How Sadat went over the brink

By K. G. THALER

LONDON (UPI). — Western diplomatic reports from the Middle East said yesterday that President Anwar Sadat was playing brinkmanship in his relations with the Kremlin and went over the brink in the process.

Sadat tried to apply the tactics of his predecessor, the late Abdel Gamal Nasser. But Nasser had Moscow's full confidence and in emergencies managed to obtain new concessions from his Soviet friends.

Sadat, the reports said, never was fully trusted by the Kremlin leaders, who would have preferred Ali Sabry to succeed Nasser. Sabry is now in jail with a number of other Egyptian leaders accused of pro-Soviet leanings.

The reports said it appears increasingly that Sadat acted out of anger and pique and outed his Soviet backers before providing for a credible and effective alternative.

Sadat, the reports suggested, may have believed that by using shock tactics against the Kremlin, the Soviets might panic and provide the kind of support with offensive weapons and direct involvement required for a credible attack on Israel.

In fact, the Russians, although surprised and shocked, had second thoughts. The Kremlin reportedly decided the turn of events may be in its favour, releasing it from an uncomfortable and dangerous commitment that could end in a war the Soviets do not want.

The speed with which the Soviets began evacuating their military personnel from Egypt appears to bear out the belief that Moscow did not allow time for second thoughts by Sadat, the reports said.

The Russians evidently did not even call for emergency talks before the evacuation was set in motion.

The reports cited Sadat's confidant, columnist Muhammad Hassanin Heykal, as saying that his chief's decision to oust the Soviet advisers came as a complete surprise to him.

Significantly, the Russians — who in the past did not stand on ceremony and dashed to Cairo at the first sign of a crisis — have so far shown no hurry to send high-level politicians or military to Egypt to plead for a review of Cairo's policy.

Sadat announced there will be talks with the Russians on a new type of relations between them. So far nothing has happened, and Moscow has remained silent on future commitments beyond reaffirming its friendship for Egypt and the Arab world at large.

But at the same time, Moscow is fast developing alternative ties of friendship in the area, in Iraq and Syria, while eyeing at the same time the strategic Persian Gulf.

The reports said that while the full scope of the Russian pullback is not yet clear, the Soviets are not likely to move out of Egyptian bases altogether. They were expected to maintain the bases they need for their own requirements. This will be their price for continuing the supply of arms spare parts and economic aid.

Sadat, the reports stressed, does not appear to have any comparable alternative backing elsewhere. The projected alignment with Libya could prove more of an embarrassment to Egypt than an asset, they added.

Paul-Henri Spaak dies, a founder of E.E.C.

Paul-Henri Spaak

BRUSSELS (Reuter). — Paul-Henri Spaak, former Belgian Prime Minister and one of the founding fathers of the European Common Market, died in hospital near here early yesterday of kidney failure. He was 73.

The Belgian diplomat with a global vision also played a leading part in founding the United Nations, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO), and many other international groups.

In Belgium, he served three times as Prime Minister and six times as Foreign Minister. He retired from active politics in 1966.

The statesman who helped to forge so many international organizations wrote late in life that he had been rewarded by seeing his dreams come true.

He added: "I have no complaints, but neither can I feel entirely happy at the present situation. I realize I have left many battles unfinished."

One major diplomatic battle that he lost occurred before World War II when he tried to keep Belgium neutral and thereby escape German occupation. He himself had to flee the country after Belgian resistance to Nazi aggression crumbled in 18 days.

For four years he lived in Britain as a leading member of the Belgian government in exile. "They were a period of transition in my life," he said. "From advocating a policy of neutrality towards other countries I passed to one of positive cooperation. From introspection I turned to the broader horizons offered by exciting new forms of international collaboration."

Mr. Spaak, President of the first United Nations General Assembly, was disappointed at the way in which the world organization evolved.

"It will be many years before the U.N. lives up to the hopes cherished at its birth in 1945," he said in his memoirs.

Earlier, Mr. Spaak had devoted a good deal of his time to NATO affairs. In 1956, he was elected Secretary-General of the organization.

Born in Brussels on January 25, 1899, Mr. Spaak was the second son of a famous Belgian family of liberals. The first socialist was his mother, who was also Belgium's first woman senator.

His father was a well-known poet and dramatist who left politics for literature. His uncle, Paul Janssen, whom he succeeded as Prime Minister in 1938, was the most famous of all Belgian liberals and died in the Nazi concentration camp at Buchenwald early in World War II.

Mr. Spaak began his political career in 1925 as political secretary to the socialist Minister of Labour.

He was first elected as a Socialist Member of Parliament in 1923 with the reputation of a left-wing agitator and in 1935 became Minister of Transport and Posts. He became Foreign Minister for the first time in 1939.

During World War I, he was imprisoned for two years by the Germans for trying to cross the frontier to join the Allies. Returning to Belgium after the war, he studied law and began practising in 1922.

In 1938, he succeeded his uncle as Prime Minister of Belgium, becoming one of the youngest Prime Ministers in European history.

After resigning over a domestic issue in 1939, he was Foreign Minister again in the wartime coalition government-in-exile in Britain and in the first postwar government of national unity.

Benelux

In March 1946, Mr. Spaak, who played a prominent part in the promotion of Benelux — the economic union of Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg — became Prime Minister again but resigned after 10 days when his government failed to secure a vote of confidence.

He began his third term as Prime Minister in 1947 and served until 1950, holding concurrently the Portfolio of Foreign Affairs.

In 1949, he went to the U.S., where he was the first Foreign Minister to sign the Atlantic Pact. He again became Foreign Minister in 1954 and from 1961 to 1965.

He played a leading role in the negotiations on the Treaty of Rome creating the European Common Market in 1957. Agreement between France and her partners might have been impossible without his conciliatory diplomacy.

In a Common Market crisis over farm policy between July 1965 and January 1966, when the French boycotted the community, Mr. Spaak laid the foundation of a successful compromise.

Mr. Spaak married twice. His first wife, Marguerite, by whom he had three children, died in August, 1964. In April, 1965, Mr. Spaak married Simone Dear.

THE GHOSTS RETURN

SINGAPORE (Ofns). — AS Premier Chou En-lai seeks to neutralize the influence of Lin Piao, the infamous "political swindler" who was Mao's glorified heir-apparent less than a year ago, half-forgotten faces of soldiers who fell from sight during the witch-hunts of the turbulent Cultural Revolution begin to reappear. For although Chou seeks to isolate the hard core of pro-Lin veterans who once served under the ex-Marshal in the old 4th Field Army by winning over the more malleable men around them, he is inevitably bringing to the fore generals from other formations whose indifference to Lin was a sin in the 'sixties but is a saving grace today.

China is expected to appoint a new Defence Minister this week, in succession to the late Lin Piao, whose death in a plane crash was officially confirmed in Peking on Friday, after months of mystery. Since his death, his fallen detractors have begun to rise again, says Ofns correspondent Dennis Bloodworth, in the second of two articles.

While Chou's new "friends from the 4th Field Army" like Pao Hsiang-kuo, former general and now Minister of Trade, continue to prosper under this system of political cross-pollination, therefore, other 4th Field Army commanders who are still the military masters of certain Chinese provinces now find themselves accommodating strange bedfellows in their fields.

For the first time in 22 years an officer who has no links with Lin Piao's old comrades-in-arms has been given the key post of commander "responsible" for the Canton Garrison. He is a veteran of the 3rd Field Army, and campaigned with distinction against the Nationalists of Chiang Kai-shek under two trusted men who were to become Chou En-lai's successive Foreign Ministers, Ch'eng-te and the late Marshal Chen Yi. His surprise appointment weakens the hold of the 4th Field Army on the great Canton Military Region, and correspondingly strengthens the hand of the Prime Minister in the south.

The official Press points out that Mao has said: "The overwhelming majority of cadres are good; those who are not good are very few in number." The unfortunates who were being harried from office by vindictive Red Guards five years ago are now (with a few exceptions) the salt of the earth — "the cadres of our Party spearheaded the attack against imperialism, feudalism and bureaucrat-capitalism," readers are reverentially reminded. If they sometimes erred, it must be remembered that Lenin himself had said of those who made no mistakes, "there are no such men, nor can there be."

Although they were often described as "oxen, ghosts, devils and snakes" during the Cultural Revolution, today it is recognized that cadres are only human after all.

The late Lin Piao with Chairman Mao.

'Red Warlord'

Similarly, the "Red Warlord" controlling Tsinan Military Region, who fought with Lin Piao against the Japanese and whose local Press and radio in Shantung province have been slow to condemn that fallen angel, has been assigned as a senior "responsible" (and almost certainly deputy commander) a former deputy Chief of Staff named Chang Tzu-chun, who has a long record of loyalty to the 1st Field Army and its swashbuckling commander, Ho Lung. But Ho Lung was damned as an anti-Maoist "bandit" in 1966 and duly consigned to oblivion. Moreover, Chang also served as Minister of Defence who was sacked in 1969 for opposing Mao, and a chief of staff who was sacked in 1965 for opposing Lin Piao, and no one was surprised in 1967 when he himself disappeared into that limbo reserved for disqualified Chinese. Yet now he is back in play.

Earlier this year a Party secretary much reviled during the Cultural Revolution because he was a close associate of Tao Chu, the notorious "revisionist" boss of Central South China and "number one ca-pitlist-roader," also reappeared as a Vice-Chairman of the Revolutionary Committee of Kwangtung province — the very scene of his disgrace.

As these political ghosts successively emerge it seems that the Maoist process whereby the Maoists overthrew the established hierarchy is being inexorably reversed to a point at which even the practical Ho Lung and the blasphemous Tao Chu may themselves one day surface. The wheel is turning half-circle. As Lin Piao, champion of the Cultural Revolution, has gone down, his fallen detractors rise again, and since the object of the Maoist process was to restore the unity of China as many of the damned as possible are to be saved, and only the "small handful" of the obdurate cast out.

Liberalization is inevitably accompanied by characteristic pains as the blood flows through China's cramped limbs again. Nearly 700 Chinese swam to Hong Kong and freedom during the first half of July alone — against the 5,000 who had fled to the British crown colony from China in the whole of the previous 4½ years. The anti-Communist claim that these desperate people leave because conditions on the mainland are more intolerable than ever.

Hong Kong officials, however, suggest that the sudden flood of refugees may be a direct consequence of the kinder treatment being meted out to citizens of the People's Republic by their own Communist Government; more dare to take their chance now, because they are no longer shot or jailed if they are caught "while attempting to escape."

Chinese permissiveness does not only mean wearing brighter clothes and reading riskier books. The official Press complains that factory cadres and workers are adopting a sloppier attitude towards safety regulations, costing, and the quality of their products. Machines have been breaking down, and the excellence of the goods they make has declined. Political education must "establish a system of machine management and maintenance, and overcome anarchism in these spheres," as a letter in the official People's Daily has stressed.

'Bumper harvests'

The world is told that China has enjoyed "bumper harvests" over the past 10 years, yet in June the authoritative Red Flag, while emphasizing that great progress had been made, added "but on the whole our agricultural output is still low. Development is geographically unbalanced, and a relatively large number of areas have not yet attained the targets laid down..." Meanwhile, local managers are accused of taking advantage of the current decentralization of industry to turn their areas into "independent kingdoms" irrespective of the demands of the State plan. Given more slack, in short, the ordinary man is behaving like an ordinary man.

But the ambivalent nature of this softer China goes beyond that, for both liberalization and its attendant ills are still an integral part of the stiff political wrangle between pragmatist and revolutionary whose very existence all these relaxations seems to belie. The moderates loosen general restrictions as Chiang Ch'ing tightens the ideological corset that further constrain Chinese opera in the campaign against "political swindlers" like the iniquitous Lin Piao. These anomalies are all products of the same bargaining process, however — a subtle give-and-take that leaves Mao's wife the thin end of the deal or the thin end of the wedge according to how you look at it, but which saves any head-on confrontation — or any final settling of accounts. If there is no "power struggle" therefore, there is also no political peace.

Easy solutions

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post

Sir, — Dr. Z. Warhaftig is to be warmly congratulated on the brilliant simplicity of his solution to the problem of mamzerim, as reported in your issue of July 26: "The true solution to the problem of mamzerim in Israel is family purity. If this were the case, there would be no mamzerim in Israel and thus no problem."

Why has no one ever thought of this before and applied it to all the other pressing social problems which face the country? I cite but two, and leave it to my readers to widen its application.

The true solution to the problem of armed robberies in Israel is adherence to the Eighth Commandment, "Thou shalt not steal." If this were the case, there would be no robberies in Israel and thus no problem.

Similarly, the true solution to the problem of the incidence of murder in Israel is lack of respect for the Sixth Commandment, "Thou shalt not kill." If this were the case there would be no murders among Jews and thus no problem.

How foolish of us not to appreciate this simple solution; and how easily within our reach is the Golden Age of the Messiah!

MUNICH GAMES AND JUSTICE

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post

Sir, — I read with disgust that whilst in Russia five Tatars were sentenced to death for their part in a mass killing of defenceless victims (July 17), several high-ranking S.S., now respectable citizens, were given three to four years in a court in Munich for giving the order to murder hundreds of Jews, after being found guilty on this and other charges (July 19).

The fact that this "severe" punishment was given in a city like Munich, which is 18 kilometres from the initiators at Dachau and is to play host to the world and its sportsmen and women soon, should bother the conscience of those in Israel who are about to send an official Israeli delegation to the Munich Games of 1972.

STATE OF ISRAEL DEVELOPMENT LOAN

KEEPING POSTED

ONE cannot be quite sure whether Mr. William F. Buckley Jr., the American conservative editor and writer, was joking or serious when he suggested that Israel might do worse than become the 51st American State. He probably does not know that a serious proposal that Palestine should become the "Seventh Dominion" of the British Commonwealth was made in 1928 by Josiah Wedgwood, who wrote a book to set out the great advantage for Palestine of becoming part of so close-knit and permanent a political body, with a few political advantages for England as well of course. Not that we see the U.S. breaking up in the same way, but we don't like the idea of being immune to attack "like Chi-needs English? Now one speaks Hebrew." * * * A TIDY-MINDED man in Jerusalem says he was walking down Jaffa Road when he noticed a rumpus at a Miral Hapayis (lottery) booth. The excitement proved to be one-sided, all on the part of the woman inside the booth, who was remonstrating with a shabbily dressed man who was rummaging through the bin for discarded tickets. He smoothed out one ticket after another and checked it against the list of winners, in the hope of an overlooked winner, and then dropped it on the pavement. The woman was pleading noisily with him not to litter the place. She would be held responsible by the inspectors and have nothing but troubles. He paid no attention. Our acquaintance says that he then spoke up to the man as sternly as possible, and told him to pick up the litter again immediately as otherwise (how else could he threaten him, he asks?) "otherwise I will be forced to do it myself. The man nodded casually and moved over so I could get at the stuff more easily. Consistent as I am I had no choice but to do what I said, and tidied the place up." He left feeling rather smug, he admits, because the woman in the booth had calmed down and the pavement was clean. At this point the beggar twitched his sleeve and pointed reproachfully to two more torn tickets on the ground which he had overlooked.

ago." Suppose we get well-armed infiltrators who claim that they are only carrying on a Chicago gang war? And how would the Magen David look on the Stars and Stripes?

* * * WE must add to this a small incident that took place a week or two ago and surprised us at the time, and still remains puzzling. We had gone to East Jerusalem to buy a pair of sandals. In the first shop we tried Hebrew, but the salesman looked blank and said in Arabic a boy would come later who spoke Hebrew. In the next place we tried English. Instead, the owner answered easily, he understood our shoe problem, did the work on the spot and everything was fine. When he received a check signed in Hebrew he said disapprovingly "You write Hebrew and don't speak Hebrew?.. then why didn't you speak Hebrew to me?.. Where are no English here now... Who

Ryun's come-back bid

JIM Ryun ran the third fastest mile of his career in Toronto Saturday night at the 80th Metro Police Games, shattering the meet and Canadian records for the distance. Ryun sped around the new rubberized asphalt track at the Canadian National Exhibition Stadium in 3:52.8 only 1.7 seconds off his world record for the mile. Ryun, on a come-back bid that he hopes will culminate in a gold medal for the 1500 metres in the Munich Olympics, took complete command of the race with 800 yards to go and virtually sprinted across the finish line, 100 yards ahead of Canada's Grant McLaren. Ryun said his attitude towards Munich was "much better than it was for Mexico." Ryun lost out to Kenya's Kipchoge Keino in the 1968 Mexico Olympics in the 1,500 metres and his career took an immediate downturn. He was plagued with physical and psychological problems and only since April has he been running with anything like his old style. Ryun's fastest time for the mile is 3:51.1, the world record for the distance which was set in 1967. He ran 3:51.3 shortly after that.

MOTOR RACING Jackie Ickx of Belgium piloted his Ferrari 312 B2 to a 40-second victory over teammate Clay Regazzoni of Switzerland in Sunday's crash-marred German Grand Prix. Ickx covered the 319.7 kilometres in a record 1 hour, 42 minutes, 12.3 seconds for an average speed of 187.7 kph. Ronnie Peterson of Sweden finished third in a STP March after Scotland's Jackie Stewart in a Tyrrell Ford lost a wheel on the last lap of the 14 round race. The Scotsman escaped unhurt. Emerson Fittipaldi of Brazil, leading this year's world drivers championship standing, also was eliminated when his car caught fire at the start of the 11th round, when he was running second. He too escaped without injury. Ickx roared out from the pole position and built up a huge lead by driving steady as a clock in a race watched by 240,000 spectators on the twisting, mountainous Nuerburgring. It was the Belgian's second win in the German Grand Prix having won in 1969. Fittipaldi still leads the championship standings with 43 points followed by Stewart with 37. Ickx picked up nine points for his win to take over third with 25 points.

Payment for receipt for stamps

The High Court of Justice discharged an order nisi calling on the Minister of Posts to show cause why he should not refrain from charging 5 agorot for acknowledgement of a purchase of stamps. The petitioner, a lawyer, requires receipts of all his expenditures for income tax purposes. In the case of purchases of postal stamps no receipt is given but a slip acknowledging the purchase is given in lieu of a receipt against a charge of 5 agorot. The petitioner claimed that this charge was not lawful - despite the existence of a regulation prescribing such a charge as the regulation itself was ultra vires section 3(1) of the Post Office Ordinance.

This section provides that: "The Minister of Posts, with the approval of the Finance Committee of the Knesset, may prescribe the rates to be charged for such postal and other services as may be undertaken by him and the circumstances according to which those rates are to be charged." The petitioner was granted an order nisi.

The Jerusalem Post
LAW REPORT
Edited by Doris Lankin
TUESDAY, AUGUST 1, 1972

On the return day the petitioner appeared on his own behalf and Mr. Y. Bar-Sela, Assistant State Attorney, appeared for the respondent. Decision Justice Berinson, who delivered the decision of the High Court, first considered the argument that the acknowledgement slip is not a postal or other service, and therefore no charge for it may be collected. He agreed with the petitioner, he held, that the giving of the acknowledgement slip is not a "postal service" proper. But it is, on the other hand, an ancillary service to the postal service of selling stamps and as such would come within the generic term "other services" in section 3(1) of the Post Office Ordinance, the word "service" having a very broad conception, including everything which one person does for another, for the latter's benefit and advantage. The petitioner's first argument should, therefore, be dismissed.

Justice Berinson, who delivered the decision of the High Court, first considered the argument that the acknowledgement slip is not a postal or other service, and therefore no charge for it may be collected. He agreed with the petitioner, he held, that the giving of the acknowledgement slip is not a "postal service" proper. But it is, on the other hand, an ancillary service to the postal service of selling stamps and as such would come within the generic term "other services" in section 3(1) of the Post Office Ordinance, the word "service" having a very broad conception, including everything which one person does for another, for the latter's benefit and advantage. The petitioner's first argument should, therefore, be dismissed.

CINEMA Garbo laughs

Ninotchka (Maxim, Tel Aviv), being shown this week as part of the re-ta Garbo Festival, was produced in 1939 and was the star's first comedy role. "Garbo laughs" was as publicity slogan at the time and now more than 30 years later she is still wonderfully infectious while her whole acting technique as remained remarkably fresh. Made about the time of the Hitler-talin pact, the film satirizes Soviet policy and procedure. Directed by Ernst Lubitsch, with Billy Wilder ("The Apartment," "The Fortunate Sould") collaborating on the screen play. It has lots of witty lines as well as amusing situations. Lubitsch has a light hand so that the whole film makes what one might call "civilized entertainment."

As for Garbo, playing a Special Invoys sent by the Soviet Government to Paris to investigate the sale of Tsarist Jewellery, she is really aptivating. She is more amusing in her first part when she plays dead-an, her deep voice very matter-of-fact, than in the latter part when she has discovered she is first of all a woman and only second a servant of the Soviet people. It is a delight to see her arrive in Paris and hear her tell the Soviet trade commissars who meet her without flowers that they should not make an issue of my womanhood." and to listen to her informing Melva Douglas (Count Leon who woos and wins her) when he first tries to flirt with her that "Your type will soon be extinct." She is utterly charming when she locks her hotel bedroom door so that she can try on the ridiculous hat she has just bought and, best of all, when she gets drunk on champagne on a night out with the Count which, however, is not stopped her "spreading political propaganda in the powder-room."

The smaller parts are all well played, Ina Claire being particular good as Countess Swana, a White Russian.

The divine and the banal Unused beauty

The Israel Festival, Daniel Barenboim, piano; Fisha Zuckerman, violin; Jacqueline du Pre, cello. (Tel Aviv, Mann Auditorium, July 28). Beethoven: Trio in D major, op. 70, No. 1 (The Ghost); Tchaikovsky: Trio in A minor, op. 85.

THIS programme consisted only of two trios: the Beethoven with the diving middle Largo assai of expressive and a Tchaikovsky work whose banality and sugary emptiness even a most captivated performance could not redeem.

The first movement of the Beethoven alternated between a highly expressive and a more subdued and less absorbing adagio and was therefore not completely satisfactory; the last movement is fairly unassuming.

This focused all attention on the middle movement, which started with an intriguing waltz-like air in the strings, a daring and highly original approach which created an unaccustomed atmosphere of gloom and gravity. From this mysterious depth the music rose gradually until one had the feeling that the composer's hidden intentions could not possibly be more clearly illuminated.

The three players—Jacqueline du Pre, who seems to have lost some of her robustness but to have gained immensely in concentration and depth, Mr. Zuckerman, who is as brilliant a chamber music player, as he is a soloist, and Mr. Barenboim, who has the extraordinary quality of being able to make his own part stand out beautifully without impairing the ensemble—were nothing short of spellbinding. When the movement finally came to its conclusion it was like emerging from a trance.

Had this movement been the ensemble's only contribution to the concert it would have been worth forgoing one's rest on a hot Friday afternoon. BENJAMIN BAR-AM

MUSIC AT KIN KERR: The New Israel String Quartet (Yag Music Centre - July 28). Haydn: Quartets opus 8, No. 2, in E-flat Major; opus 54, No. 1, in G Major; opus 15, No. 2, in D minor.

THE third programme in the Haydn series kept up the promise of the two preceding evenings. The works selected (dated 1769, 1788, 1797) again gave a cross-section of the master's development of the species, with the earlier ones by no means inferior in appeal and content to the structurally and texturally more accomplished later-period Haydn. The four artists' performances showed a perfectly attuned and polished homogeneity on this occasion, and leader Alexander Tal, in particular, played his at times most demanding parts with aplomb and unflinching assurance. It is astounding that so much beautiful music should be unused — of the three works played, only opus 76, No. 2 is found reasonably often in string quartet programmes. The New Israel String Quartet had one of its happiest evenings — its playing was spirited, well-rehearsed and congenial to the music in all its facets, moods and forms. It is amazing how unflinching these Haydn quartets produced a happy mood in the listener. YOCHANAN BOEHM

Overdoing the subtlety

DANCE has always been associated in the common mind with gaiety, excitement, vitality. However, it seems to lack such associations for today's dance artists — the choreographers who too often find their prime source of inspiration in shape and in perception of subtle changes in line. A sense of sculptured design is, of course, an important facet to choreography. But when it is made the central facet there is a loss of drive, of animal energy, of theatrical involvement — a loss so grave that the resulting product may emerge as static, frozen — the very antithesis of dance.

On July 29, Batsheva Dance Company graced the stage of Jerusalem's Binyanei Ha'Ooma with their beautiful bodies, the delightful technique and concentration of each performer and many moments of stunning form, in a programme which included three world premieres. But the total impact of the evening was deadening because of the choreographic limitations.

Much of the trouble lay in the programming. There is room in an evening for one fine composition like Linda Rabin's "Three Out of Me," whose appeal lies mainly in its textural qualities, balanced construction and subtle stylistic contrasts. It presents its people in a self-absorbed, primitive animal state, and gives them three moods to express: Nurit Stern as a stolid, exploring wanderer; Pamela Shami and Yair Vardi as a tender, harmonious couple; and a trio of bunched-up playful bumblers. But this work should never open a programme because its stealthy, strained, silent entrance is too quiet for an audience still rustling in its seats and not yet fully receptive. Further, its intense abstractions are depleted when followed by more intense abstractions such as "Lyric Episodes" by Miral Sharon.

tangles, to form a large stage centerpiece. I must confess that my attention wandered intermittently. I was aware of interesting designs and intelligent composition, but was left unmoved. Again, had this dance appeared in another context, it could have had a greater effect. But coming after "Three Out of Me" and before Martha Graham's "Herodiade," it was too much — or too little.

Bahmin Ron of the Batsheva Dance Company in "Moon: Full."

"Lyric Episodes" begins with a girls' trio of shapes and lines that does not create any clear imagery. Rina Schenfeld's brooding entrance lifts the work and focusses it somewhat, as her presence always does. She engages with a boy in a low-keyed, coolly athletic pas de deux, in silence. A group section concludes the piece, which is occasionally heightened by the expansion and contraction of red rec-

"Herodiade" is not one of Graham's richest creations. A duet between a woman who is about to meet some mysterious destiny and another woman who helps prepare her, it is like the treatment of the bride and her anxieties in "Appalachian Spring," where it makes more sense. (Both works were premiered in 1944.) Neither Rena Gluck nor Laurie Freedman was able to invest the repetitive, slight context with the majestic emotional sweep that Martha Graham and May O'Donnell brought to bear on these roles, thereby creating at least dramatic conviction. I was left wondering what all the fuss was about. Finally John Butler's "Moon: Full," based on the idea of the transformations and madness which can occur at that time. Here, surely were possibilities for dynamic encounters, even explosions. But no such luck. One more series of those posturing group pas de deux, so characteristic of this choreographer's style, in which exotic, erotic lifts and unlikely positions abound and in which the girls seldom propel themselves from place to place, but must be carried, pushed or dragged by their partners. Modish, inventive, but sterile.

The Batsheva dancers, with their great reservoir of buoyant energy and dramatic projection, deserve more lively material than this — and so do their audiences. JOAN B. CASS

Candy industry strike enters second week

Jerusalem Post Reporter
TEL AVIV. — The strike in the candy industry yesterday entered its second week, with both sides giving conflicting versions of what happened in yesterday's inconclusive meeting between Histadrut Secretary-General Yitzhak Ben-Aharon and heads of the Manufacturers' Association.

According to a spokesman for the manufacturers, Mr. Zalman Suzayeff, head of the Association's Labour Relations Committee, had sent a letter to Mr. Ben-Aharon on Sunday, asking him to clarify the Histadrut's insistence on "equal pay for women" in Elite plants. (The company maintains that it adheres to this principle, but that since women are employed mostly in easier jobs their pay is lower.)

The spokesman said that a meeting was arranged at Mr. Suzayeff's home yesterday afternoon with Mr. Ben-Aharon and Mr. Mark Mosevics, president of the Association and Elite's joint managing director.

"Mr. Ben-Aharon suggested that the negotiations between the trade union delegation and the Association be resumed at a higher level," the spokesman said. "Mr. Mosevics agreed, but Mr. Ben-Aharon insisted that the 25-man delegation be invited to the high-level meeting." Mr. Mosevics consulted Mr. Aha Fromencko, general manager of Elite, who rejected such a large forum as ineffectual.

According to the Histadrut spokesman, however, Mr. Suzayeff suggested that Mr. Ben-Aharon take the lead in solving the dispute. "After consulting his associates," Mr. Mosevics gave a negative reply to all of Mr. Ben-Aharon's suggestions," the Histadrut spokesman said. He told The Jerusalem Post he did not know what these suggestions were.

Meanwhile, Tel Aviv Labour Council secretary Uri Alpert yesterday called on truck drivers, storekeepers and porters not to break the Elite strike by transporting merchandise from the firm's warehouses. "The Histadrut and the strikers wish to avoid any clash with the police," he said. (The District Court here on Sunday issued a temporary injunction forbidding the Histadrut and the workers from interfering with the removal of merchandise from the warehouses.)

Rav-Nitzav Aharon Sela (right), outgoing Inspector-General of the Police, and Police Minister Shlomo Hillel pin the rank of Rav-Nitzav on Aharon Sela, the new Inspector-General. (Weiss)

Aharon Sela becomes Police Inspector-Gen'l

Jerusalem Post Reporter
Rav-Nitzav Aharon Sela assumed his duties as chief of Israel's police force at midnight last night.

At a ceremony yesterday in the office of Police Minister Shlomo Hillel, R/N Sela, 54, was formally named to the post of Inspector-General and promoted from Nitzav. His predecessor, R/N Pinhas Koppel, who had held the post eight years, handed the banner of the I-G's office to Mr. Hillel, who passed it on to R/N Sela.

Mr. Hillel praised the outgoing Inspector-General, asserting that he had presided over the police during a period when its normal duties were compounded by acts of terror.

R/N Koppel, he noted, had overseen the founding of the Border Police and had served as its first commander.

R/N Koppel, obviously moved by the occasion, noted that he was ending a police career spanning 20 years. He pinned the Rav-Nitzav insignia on his successor's epaulet and shook hands with the score of top police officers present.

R/N Sela expressed hope that the Government and Knesset would augment police manpower and that the public would cooperate with the law enforcers. Mr. Hillel named Nitzav Shaul Rosolio to the newly created post of Deputy Inspector-General.

Honest pedlar seeks woman who left change

Jerusalem Post Reporter
NETANYA. — A notations pedlar from Hebron yesterday asked police here to find a woman to whom he owed IL55.

The pedlar, Alzeitit Mohammed Taleh, 28, told police he sold a blouse for IL15 to a woman on the beach, and received from her a IL100 note. She went off without getting her change. But when he started looking for her, municipal inspectors came along and ordered him to clear off the beach, he said. He therefore decided to bring the money to the police in hopes they could find the woman.

Orthodox parties worried about Olympic games

Jerusalem Post Reporter
The three religious party factions in the Knesset yesterday appealed to Education Minister Yigal Alon to see to it that Israel's Olympic team does not take part in the closing ceremonies of the Olympic games, which fall on Rosh Hashana.

In a telegram sent to the Minister, the Knesset factions of the National Religious Party, Agudat Yisrael and Poalei Agudat Yisrael refer to the decision of the Knesset Education and Culture Committee to ask the Olympic Committee to refrain from doing anything "which will violate the sanctity of Rosh Hashana" at the closing of the games.

Mr. Yariv Oren, head of the Ministry of Sport and Physical Culture Authority, told The Jerusalem Post last night that, while the Olympic Committee will have to decide on the participation of the Israeli team in the closing ceremonies, it is "inconceivable that our flag should be absent on the occasion." At the same time, he noted, it is not clear whether participation of the athletes in the closing march would constitute "religious violation" of the holiday.

Peres checks beaches

Jerusalem Post Reporter
EILAT. — Transport Minister Shimon Peres yesterday toured the coast between Eilat and Sharm el-Sheikh, in order to observe for himself the extent of pollution of the beaches.

Mr. Peres felt that the complaints of beach pollution had been somewhat exaggerated, but announced that he will appoint 12 Transport Ministry officials to regularly inspect the beaches and to patrol the waters to observe the extent of waste-dumping by ships.

Ancor strike threat filed

TEL AVIV. — The Tel Aviv Labour Council yesterday served notice on the Ancor company that it would authorize a general strike starting August 15 if the company failed to pay its workers an annual bonus.

Labour Council Secretary Uri Alpert noted that the company had rejected the Histadrut's demand that it institute a profit-sharing scheme for its workers. In lieu of this, the workers — backed by the Histadrut — are demanding an annual bonus equivalent to from two weeks' to a month's wages.

Bread supply back to normal in Haifa today

Jerusalem Post Reporter
HAIFA. — Bread distribution will be back to normal today, after agreement was reached yesterday between the bakery owners and the Bakers Union, settling the latter's wage demands.

For two days some 200 Haifa bakers began work two hours late — at 6 a.m., instead of 4 a.m., to back their claims, which were supported by the Labour Council. The bakers claimed they have been among the lowest-paid workers in the service industry for years, though their work is hard and hours are inconvenient.

The owners, on the other hand, complained that because of tight control of bread prices profit margins offer no satisfactory return on their investment. Bread prices in Israel are among the world's lowest. A loaf of bread costs less than a small piece of cake, they claimed.

The owners, however, agreed to raise the bakers' wages, which amount to about IL700 monthly after many years of work.

Emma Berger reiterates: We're not interested in land

ZICHRON YA'ACOV. — The German Christian sect leader, Emma Berger, yesterday issued a statement categorically denying that she or any representative of her group was conducting negotiations to purchase any more property in Israel.

(The Zichron Ya'acov Local Council, supported by Jewish religious groups, has recently lost a court fight contesting the sale of the former Dora Schwarz Pension here to Mrs. Berger's group.)

In yesterday's statement, which was signed by Elise Berger, sister of Emma Berger and business manager of the group, it was stressed that the pension was being used as a hostel for members of the group visiting Israel from Canada, Switzerland, Holland, Sweden, Hungary, Rumania and Germany. The sect

'Versailles' closed, owner said abroad

Jerusalem Post Reporter
TEL AVIV. — Mr. Haim Shif, owner of the expensive Versailles furniture shop, has apparently fled the country and shut down his basement store on Kikar Malsheh Israel.

Customs authorities have reportedly opened proceedings against him for having provided false information as to the value of the goods imported by his firm, thereby paying much lower customs duties than were due.

The customs authorities have secured an order attaching the stock at Versailles, reportedly to the tune of tens of thousands of pounds. It was learned that they are pursuing their investigation with a view to filing criminal charges against Mr. Shif, whose family owns a chain of hotels.

His wife, Mrs. Semadar Shif, has remained in the country. She told reporters yesterday morning she had shut down the shop opposite Town Hall and intends reopening on September 15 at the previous premises, at 164 Rehov Ben Yehuda.

For a number of years now, she said, she will work out of a temporary office in Rehov Gottlieb.

Mr. Shif was brought to court by customs authorities and heavily fined over a year ago, after it emerged that he was misusing the rights of immigrants to duty-free commodities for wholesale imports of goods for persons not entitled to the exemption. Some immigrants had complained that Mr. Shif put twice the amount of furniture they had actually ordered on their purchase slips.

Mrs. Berger claimed that these reports were instigated by unnamed persons for "patently obvious motives." She added that "the Dora Schwarz Pension was bought after the owners had pressed us for a whole year and after no public or private institution had shown the slightest interest in the property."

Aharon Yadin backing the Elite strikers, and whether this did not amount to political backing of a breach in official wage policy, Mr. Sapir said: "I have not yet seen Yadin. Whether the Elite person's wage demands are justified I cannot say. I do know that Food Workers' Union Secretary Eliezer Bar-Haim promised to seek a compromise." He said he did not wish to intervene in the Elite strike and advised both sides that the longer the strike lasted the worse off both of them would be.

Mr. Sapir refused to be drawn out on his attitude towards Histadrut Secretary-General Yitzhak Ben-Aharon, and when asked whether he would put all his weight behind appointing another Histadrut chief, Mr. Sapir would only say: "It's a year off until such a decision must be made and that is a very long way off."

The Minister hotly defended his economic policy, saying, "I have yet to hear anyone in the Coalition or the Opposition producing an alternative, I heard, for example that Haim Landau M.K. (Herut) has an alternative programme for young couples' housing — well, I am still awaiting his concrete proposals." Mr. Sapir became heated when denying charges of "the poor getting poorer," declaring that "in no other country is so much done to reduce the social gap." He quoted from the Horowitz Committee report that the social gap had been narrowing since 1967, and produced a long list of statistics on government programmes for housing slum-dwellers, young couples and meshavim, plus efforts to bridge the education gap.

Mr. Sapir used the word "revolution" when describing the government's efforts to ameliorate the lot of the poor, and again attacked National Insurance Institute Director Israel Katz for having warned of 250,000 persons living in sub-standard housing.

One questioner interjected, "but you yourself have said there are 50,000 families living badly, and that comes to the same figures," and Mr. Sapir retorted, "but you never heard his other speeches." The Minister also warned again that should wage demands get out of hand, the government would have no choice but to levy new indirect taxes — while seeking to reduce income taxes by another IL350m. in 1973.

Eban says Israel too interested in its image

By DAVID LANDAU
Jerusalem Post Reporter

Foreign Minister Abba Eban declared last night that Israel's unpopularity among extreme left-wing movements was not a failure of her foreign policy, but was inherent in the contradiction between Jewish values and the nihilistic negativism of the revolutionary left.

Speaking at the opening session of the American Jewish Congress annual American-Israel Dialogue in Jerusalem, Mr. Eban sought to "put this unpopularity with the left into perspective." (The theme of this year's Dialogue is "Jews and Revolution.")

Israel was "too excessively preoccupied with its image," said Mr. Eban. It had "a rather neurotic insistence on being admired" which was undoubtedly a product of the insecurity of Jewish history. But however much effort was put into countering radical left opinion — and the effort was constant — Israel would never win it over "in totality." "The New Left is the author and progenitor of the new anti-Semitism. Anti-Zionism is neo-anti-Semitism," the Foreign Minister declared.

zod. The status quo could well be changed by the parties to it — but it would be no solution for the "religious majority to simply sweep religion away."

On Israel's future borders, Mr. Eban raised the spectre of an Arab minority of 40-45 per cent by 1990 — if the present borders were retained. It was no solution to say, "as one of my colleagues said: 'demography, shmemography.'" A 40 per cent Arab minority would be a majority to all intents and purposes, since the 60 per cent of Jews would be divided into their numerous parties. The Jewish character and destiny of the State would be lost.

By contrast, statisticians had worked out that if Israel returned to the pre-1967 borders there would only be 2 per cent Arabs by 1990 — that's not so far off — I shall just be at the age to qualify for our highest offices." Mr. Eban quipped. The solution, of course, was to find the medium between secure borders and a secure demographic future for the Jews in Israel, Mr. Eban declared.

The president of the American Jewish Congress, Rabbi Arthur Hertzberg, who delivered the other keynote speech last night, warned that the security of Jews in America and Israel could not be achieved by permanent alliance with either the right or the left. Rabbi Hertzberg said: "Jews are safest in non-doctrinaire, non-ideological regimes. Revolutions of both the right and left, whenever they try to remake men to fit their image, always find the Jew to be obdurate and peculiar."

Rabbi Hertzberg contended that since the acceptance of Zionism, Jews had become politically united, but culturally divided. The division was particularly pronounced between Israel and the U.S. What would happen to U.S. Jewry after peace came to Israel and all the Russian Jews were released? Rabbi Hertzberg asked. American Jewry needed to seek new content for its communal existence.

Lyova Eliav seeks Cabinet post in 1973

TEL AVIV. — Mr. Arye ("Lyova") Eliav, M.K. and former Labour Party Secretary-General, announced yesterday that he would seek a Cabinet post after the next national election in 1973.

Speaking at a press conference on the publication of his new book, "Eretz HaZvi," Mr. Eliav said his book was his "political and ideological identity card." In Mr. Eliav's view, as expounded in his book, the key to peace lies in Israel's helping to establish a Palestinian Arab state in most of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip.

As to the future of Israeli settlements in the administered areas, Mr. Eliav said when peace comes "there must be a two-way movement of Jews and Arabs between Israel and the future Palestinian-Jordanian state."

He intimated, however, that if he had been consulted before the existing settlements were set up he would have advised that it be done differently — both from the political and the technical points of view.

Mr. Eliav said he planned to campaign throughout the country — but particularly in Labour Party circles and in the Labour settlements — to muster support for his ideas — and his candidacy.

Rosh Pina, 90, celebrates anniversary

Jerusalem Post Reporter
ROSH PINA. — Residents of Rosh Pina, now celebrating its 90th anniversary, were told of plans by the Tourism Ministry to develop part of the village into a tourist attraction, which will include hotels and resort facilities.

This, however, did not prevent townsmen from taking the authorities to task for what they regard as complete indifference toward their village.

Lyova Eliav seeks Cabinet post in 1973

Speakers at the opening of the ceremony Sunday night included Interior Minister Yosef Burg, who paid tribute to the 90th anniversary of the Government of Rosh Pina's early settlers and their tenacity; Knesset Interior Committee chairman Moshechil Sarkis; O/C Northern Command Aluf Yitzhak Eilat; Mayor Yisrael Peled of Ramat Gan, which has adopted the village; and Rosh Pina native Ahim-Melchior Zvi-Hadani, who recalled the village's role as a way station for illegal immigrants from Arab lands during the British Mandate. He noted that the first Jewish martyr to be executed by the British, Shimon Ben-Yosef, came from the village.

The anniversary festivities continued yesterday with sport events, cultural programmes and dancing highlighting the celebrations.

ALYA-EXPO 1973 opened at the Z.O.A. House in Tel Aviv yesterday, with displays and advice to potential olim by some 30 institutions, as well as private and public companies. A similar Alya-Expo closed recently in Jerusalem.
